Choosing an image As you create images, you see the thumbnails of the images as they sit on the left side of the program window. When you create a new image, the image appears in the middle of the window, surrounded by the New document icon and a drop-down menu. You can use this menu to choose a template, color scheme, and type of image. (Keep in mind that you have to save the image for the template or color scheme to work on the image; if you make changes to the image before saving, the changes will be lost.) Figure 1-1 shows the Start screen with four thumbnails of images that are displayed, as well as the New document icon that you can click to open a new image. You also see how the main part of the window is dominated by the image in the middle. FIGURE 1-1: This screen shot shows a Start screen with thumbnails of four images. In a similar fashion, when you open an image file, Photoshop offers the Start screen, shown in Figure 1-2. FIGURE 1-2: Click the New document icon to open an image file in Photoshop. Note that the bottom thumbnail is a web image. As you see in the next section, the Create a Web link is based on that thumbnail.

Q: How to use stringbuilder on c# I have list of objects var list = new List() { new MyObject() { code="1233", name="chick"} new MyObject() { code="2347", name="chick"} new MyObject() { code="8887", name="chick"} new MyObject() { code="7777", name="chick"} }; and as I'm getting the collection from SqlDataReader, as I am only getting 3 or 4 rows back, I'm filling this list as SqlDataReader reader = cmd.ExecuteReader(); int num = reader.FieldCount; List myObjectList = new List(num); while (reader.Read()) { MyObject myObject = new MyObject(); // Iterate the table values for (int i = 0; i

Q: How do I change the type of an Updatepanel, other than removing it and adding again? I have an asp.net page with an updatepanel that loads some images and text via an ajax get call. The images and text have to be a certain size (5,5) so I figured I could just change the type of the updatepanel to "Table" - but if I do that, it falls apart. I haven't found any other options apart from adding it again and using an image and asp:Label. Is that my only option? (I'd rather not add another control and do the update from there, I think it would be cleaner to use asp:Label for it) A: If you are talking about the inner updatepanel, inside you will have all the controls defined and be able to change their type easily using the.HasColumn="true" if you want to use that control. If you are talking about the outer updatepanel, and you are opening a pop-up, you will have to use the outer updatepanel and set the contenttemplate to be something different than the outer updatepanel (if it is set to be the default). Q: PHP create file on filesystem I have some php code that is designed to create a file on a filesystem. The code I've created so far is as follows. if (file_exists($filename)) { if (!file_exists("".$filename.".tmp")) { $handle = fopen($filename, 'w'); fclose($handle); } else { $handle = fopen($filename, 'w'); fclose($handle); } } However, this code is not behaving correctly. When I run the following code, I get the expected result. file_exists("foo.tmp") file_exists("foo.tmp") === false file_exists("foo.tmp") However, when I run the following code, I get unexpected results. file_exists("foo.tmp") file_exists("foo.tmp") === false file_exists("foo.tmp") ===
